

Call for proposals to host EAHN 2022, the 7th International Meeting of the European Architectural History Network

The European Architectural History Network is pleased to announce the call for proposals to host EAHN2022, its 7th International Meeting. EAHN Biennial Conferences are increasingly popular events attracting scholars from around the world and promoting international exchange and collaboration. They play a leading role in consolidating and fostering architectural history research in Europe and overseas. Since 2010, when the EAHN's first international conference was held at Guimaraes in Portugal, the Biennial Conference has been hosted in Brussels (2012), Turin (2014), Dublin (2016) and Tallinn (2018). The 6th Biennial Conference will be held in Edinburgh in 2020.

Any scholarly recognized institution, with an appointed General Chair (a member of EAHN, local to the host institution) can apply to host a biennial EAHN International Meeting. We particularly invite institutions from regions and countries who have not so far hosted EAHN Meetings.

Please submit your proposal to office@eahn.org as a single PDF document by 1 February 2019 providing the following information:

1. a preliminary Organising Committee, which must include the General Chair, to oversee the practicalities of hosting the conference
2. the proposed venue(s)
3. an outline of the attractions of the host city and potential local and/or regional tour programmes
4. the architectural relevance of the institution and/or city and rationale why it would be a good choice to host an EAHN Biennial Conference
5. a tentative list of keynote speakers, considering that out of the three to be selected, one should be a scholar of the hosting country and one should hold a profile for a sum up address
6. evidence of financial capacity to sustain the conference and an indicative budget, including revenues from conference fees (the host institution holds responsibility for all financial requirements, either internally or with the support of sponsors; support from the EAHN is solely institutional and scholarly)
7. suitable dates for the conference – four and a half consecutive days (Wednesday afternoon to Sunday) in the month of June

The EAHN will aim to make its decision at its business meeting in Zaragoza (16 February 2019). For further details and a full guide on hosting an EAHN Biennial Conference see the EAHN website.
