

Georgia Institute of Technology
School of Architecture
245 4th Street, NW, Suite 351
Atlanta, GA 30332

Call for Papers
Divergence in Architectural Research

Divergence in Architectural Research is an international doctorate symposium organized by the ConCave Ph.D. Student Group in the Georgia Institute of Technology School of Architecture. The Ph.D. Symposium seeks to create a platform for sharing current research in architecture, with invited scholars and other doctoral students from architecture and allied fields. The symposium will engage the divergent aspects of architectural research as it is taking place today across epistemological frameworks, highlighting the emerging intersections in the below-mentioned topics:

1. Architectural History, Theory, and Society
2. Architecture, Culture, and Behavior
3. Design Methods, Computing, and Production
4. Design Technologies, Data and Performance
5. Urban studies, Systems and Ecologies

We invite papers by doctoral students to present their ongoing research and hope to expand the conversation around the state of agency in architecture research today.

The symposium will act as a nexus for connections with established scholars and fellow researchers. Contributing researchers should be PhD students whose work emerges from the architectural domain. The Symposium will take place March 5-6, 2020, on the campus of Georgia Institute of Technology, Atlanta, Georgia.

Please submit your paper abstract (500 words max.) with a short biographical note (150 words max.) on the symposium website.

Submission Opens: May 27, 2019

Deadline for Abstract Submission: September 7, 2019

For Submission, visit: <https://arch.gatech.edu/divergence-symposium>

Contact: divarch-contact@design.gatech.edu

Divergence in Architectural Research Symposium
Organizing Committee